Tour highlights

Yukhin Peak (5,130 m) rises in the northern spurs of the Trans-Alay Range, close to the towering Lenin Peak. This 8-day group trek from Osh begins in the foothills: from the village of Kozho-Kelen, with its canyons, grotto and waterfall, you trek through high summer pastures to the foot of Dzhyptyk Pass and cross the pass (4,185 m) into the Alay Valley, with Lenin Peak and the Trans-Alay Range ahead.

These first days are your acclimatization for the second part at Achyk-Tash Base Camp: a hike to the ridge of Petrovsky Peak (4,200 m), the crossing of Traveler's Pass (4,150 m) to Camp 1 at 4,400 m and the ascent of Yukhin Peak by its classic route, with no steep rock or ice and no special equipment. From the summit you look straight at the north face of Lenin Peak and out over the Alay Valley.

Nights are spent in a village guesthouse, a yurt camp and comfortable tent camps, with full board and pack animals carrying your luggage. The tour suits travelers with moderate hiking experience, good fitness and good health.

Difficulty: Challenging. For fit hikers with moderate trekking experience: two high passes (Dzhyptyk 4,185 m, Traveler's Pass 4,150 m), a summit day to Yukhin Peak (5,130 m), trekking days of up to 25 km (7–9 hours) with up to 1,245 m of ascent, a river crossing and five nights in tent camps at 3,600–4,400 m. No technical climbing is needed, but good fitness, health and acclimatization are essential.

Day-by-day itinerary

DAY

1

Osh – Kozho-Kelen village (100 km, about 4 hrs)

In the morning we drive from Osh to the village of Kozho-Kelen. The road follows the Ak-Buura River between green, juniper-covered mountains, past meadows, flower fields and shepherds' camps, and passes the Papan Reservoir, which supplies Osh with water and irrigates farmland in Kyrgyzstan and Uzbekistan.

On arrival in Kozho-Kelen (2,270 m) we stay with a local family and set off on a 2–3 hour acclimatization walk, with lunch boxes. The trail leads through narrow canyons with unusual rock formations to the Blue Grotto and a waterfall.

Back at the guesthouse there is time to rest before dinner.

Drive: 100 km, about 4 hrs. Hike: 8 km, 2–3 hrs, +350 m.

2

Kozho-Kelen – foot of Dzhyptyk Pass (trek)

After breakfast we start trekking along the mountain river to the foot of Dzhyptyk Pass. This is a jailoo – a high summer pasture – in the truest sense: a wide valley with snow-capped peaks on the horizon, mountain spruce and junipers, clean air and natural patterns on the rocks.

Dinner and overnight at a shared yurt camp (3,050 m).

Trek: 11 km, 5–6 hrs, +780 m.

3

Dzhyptyk Pass (4,185 m) – Alay Valley – Achyk-Tash Base Camp (3,600 m)

Today we cross Dzhyptyk Pass into the Alay Valley. An easy walk through alpine meadows to the upper Dzhyptyk gorge is followed by a steep climb on scree to the pass, about 4–5 hours in all. From the top you look out over the Alay Valley and the Pamir; in good weather you can see the 7,000-meter Lenin Peak and the panorama of the Trans-Alay Range.

After lunch we descend through the gorge along an old, closed road to the "Rock Gate", where the car is waiting. Transfer to Achyk-Tash Base Camp, rest, dinner and overnight in tents.

Trek: 25 km, 7–9 hrs, +1,245 m, –885 m.

4

Achyk-Tash Base Camp – ridge of Petrovsky Peak (4,200 m)

Today you can climb to the ridge of nearby Petrovsky Peak (4,200 m) for spectacular views of the valley below and the Achyk-Tash area.

If you prefer, you can spend the whole day at the base camp to rest and pack for the climb to Camp 1 – or try a paddle board.

Dinner and overnight at the base camp.

Hike: 8 km, about 4 hrs, ± 600 m.

5

Achyk-Tash Base Camp – Traveler's Pass (4,150 m) – Camp 1 (4,400 m)

After breakfast we head towards the foot of Lenin Peak, crossing Traveler's Pass (Puteshestvennikov Pass, 4,150 m) on a good path in about 1–1.5 hours. From the pass there are excellent views of Lenin Peak and the Lenin Glacier; sometimes there is snow on the pass.

We then descend to the left moraine of the Lenin Glacier and trek on for about 3 hours. On the way a river has to be crossed carefully – early morning is the best time, as the water rises quickly during the day. Along the left moraine we continue to Camp 1.

Dinner and overnight in tents at Camp 1.

Trek: 14 km, 4–5 hrs, +800 m.

6

Camp 1 – ascent of Yukhin Peak (5,130 m) – Camp 1

After breakfast we climb Yukhin Peak (5,130 m). The classic route involves no steep rock or ice climbing and needs no special equipment. From the summit there is a breathtaking view of the north face of Lenin Peak and the Alay Valley.

After the ascent we return to Camp 1 for dinner and the night.

Trek: 8 km, 5–7 hrs, ± 730 m.

7

Camp 1 – Achyk-Tash Base Camp

After breakfast we return to the base camp: a short climb first, then almost 4 hours of descent. At the base camp a well-deserved drink and a hot shower await.

Dinner and overnight at the base camp.

Trek: 14 km, about 4 hrs, +100 m, –800 m.
